Team Formation

✓ Published

 Edit

Form a team of exactly four students, subdivided into two pairs of two students each. Pick a name for your team consisting of a string of regular text characters that can be used to specify groups in canvas.

CVN students should team with other CVN students unless you are local and can easily work together with an on-campus team.

All four members of the team should, in most cases, use the same programming language - please choose C/C++, Java or Python - and same platform - please choose Linux, Mac or Windows. If you would like different members of your team to use different languages/platforms and/or choose different languages/platforms than those listed here, you must get approval from the instructor in advance.

Submit your team name and the full names and unis of all four students, with an indication of which two students constitute one pair and which two constitute the other pair. Every member of your team should submit the same thing, so make sure to agree and coordinate (later team assignments will only need to be submitted by one member and will automatically appear for all members, after we've set up project groups in canvas). You should submit as soon as possible after you have a four-student team; you can modify until the deadline.

If by class time on the due date you do not have a team of 4, ask for help at the beginning of class and we will try to arrange teams during class time. Ask for help if you have a team of 1 (just yourself), 2, 3, 5, 6, or any other size that's not exactly 4. Do NOT wait until the end of class, when everyone is leaving, to ask for help. If the class enrollment is not conveniently a multiple of 4, which it probably won't be, we will improvise during class time.

If for any reason the submission deadline is imminent and you are still looking for a team, or if you have a pair but not a full team, make sure you still submit anyway.

This assignment will be graded complete/incomplete.
